Per usual requirements for revenue anticipation loans, the brary must demonstrate that the funding is required. The goal should be for the library to plan, so that these annual loans are not onger needed and the financial relationship of the two entities more distinct, as is the case in other communities.		For anytax anticipation notes, theibrary will provide the necessary documentation to substantiate the need for suchfunding. This proces will provide the appearance and evidence that the entities are separate and dist. The district no longer undertakesevenue anticipation note borrowing for the library.
